

where the various elements within this heritage site are harmoniously connected and belong to the whole. In this sense, the notion of play features prominently in the 'Integrated Design' approach so that young people are also involved in creating the vision for Heartlands.

In this regard, popular themes to date are: adventure and climbing; slides and towers; water and bridges; ball games; and no fences. A suite of innovative and integrated play opportunities that young people can explore and engage with throughout the area is being sought. This requires the participation of young people in the development of bespoke play design elements such as 'sculptural landforms' and public art interventions for play.
