Date : November 22, 2009

Soundwalk, the company that does evocative and extremely effective audio-tours of special places (Ground Zero, St Germain) is pleased to announce a new blog series entitled Editions, a monthly journal of unreleased tracks by artists and composers who explore the use of environmental field recordings as creative source material and means of capturing a sonic moment. Through listening to these recordings we have the opportunity to become aware of the various dialects that can exist in the language of field recording compositions.

It looks as though it will become a promising archive of interesting sound, meshed with good visuals...really an interesting way of thinking and experiencing the connection between sound and place.
